

NAVIGATING TRANSFORMATION – MIDDLE EAST

A strategic lens on resilience, preparedness, and growth

Dear Reader,

We are operating in an increasingly complex geopolitical environment.

Yet across the GCC, we continue to see a defining characteristic hold firm: economic resilience anchored by institutional strength, fiscal robustness, and long-term national vision. While regional developments warrant close attention, they are not altering the strategic direction. Instead, they are accelerating priorities that were already in motion.

In times like these, leadership requires clarity over reaction, preparation over prediction, and long-term perspective over near-term disruptions. At Frost & Sullivan, our focus has been on supporting leadership teams as they reassess exposure, strengthen resilience, and remain positioned for sustainable growth.

This month's edition brings together our perspectives, strategic tools, and practical frameworks we have developed to help organizations navigate uncertainty with confidence and discipline.

Stay Ahead.

Warm Regards,

Abhay Bhargava

How we at Frost & Sullivan are supporting Leadership Teams:

As the regional environment evolves, our work has focused on translating complexity into clarity and insight into action.

01 · Leadership Perspective: Resilience by Design

Abhay recently shared a leadership viewpoint with Gulf Business, addressing why the Gulf's long-term trajectory remains intact and how current developments are accelerating—not disrupting—strategic priorities embedded within national visions.

Leadership Readiness Self-Assessment

In structurally fluid environments, preparedness cannot be assumed — it must be assessed. We invite leadership teams to complete Frost & Sullivan's Response Framework Self-

Assessment designed to help organizations evaluate readiness across strategy, operations, capital allocation, and supply-chain resilience.

ON COMPLETION, YOU GAIN ACCESS TO:

- Strategic perspective: Strategic Reorientation in the Middle East: Gearing for Growth
- An on-demand leadership webinar where Frost & Sullivan experts unpack the strategic thinking behind these shifts
- An opportunity to engage in a one-to-one strategic discussion with a senior regional expert from Frost & Sullivan, to exchange perspectives, stress-test assumptions, and explore implications specific to your organization and sector.
